

A lovely scale

HOBART is a charming old city. I was dismayed to note recently that many old buildings had been demolished to make way for absolute atrocities. Hobart does not need enormous multistorey edifices Like the Fragrance Tower.

Even if you do not take into account the wishes of locals then tourists do not want to come here to see buildings they can see at home. Please keep Hobart as low-rise as possible.

Do not allow this travesty of a development go ahead. Instead, why not renovate and redevelop all the many available empty buildings/warehouses etc? Furthermore, keep future designs and developments sensible and Australian.
